Fried Oreos, Music and Sunburns

Inside this Tissue:

Fried Oreos	1
Shout-outs Wanted	1
Calendar of Events	2
Spring Ruminations	2

Sadly enough, the next TP is the last tissue of this school year. It's been a great year, right? As always, the last issue is the annual "shout-out" issue. So send me anything you want to get published, and I'll make sure that your word is spread throughout each toilet stall in this house.

Keep the tradition alive.
Send me a shout-out at franky@wharton.

So hopefully, everyone knows where they'll be living next year, what classes they'll be taking in the fall, and which recitations to definitely skip. So what else is there to look forward to...Definitely not finals right? If you answered yes, Hello Stwing member! Haha jk. If not, you're probably looking forward to Spring Fling.

I'm 92% sure that you've probably heard a lot about fling. Like, how everyone comes into class on Monday morning with blood shot eyes and migraines. Or how social lubrication in the form of some distilled grain beverage, which is best served cold, flows down the street like milk and honey flows from...the land of milk and honey. And how the quad is the most amazing place to be this weekend. (Heck, I've heard of a friend who decided to pitch up a tent in the Quad on Thursday night so he wouldn't miss any of the action that weekend.) As a sophomore, I can say that these things are definitely true. But the most important take away is to "please fling responsibly." If you haven't caught on yet, this is the new motto from this year's SPEC (Social Planning and Events Committee) Board. Yeah it's sorta lame. It actually sounds like they plagiarized it from somewhere. I should know since I am the king of plagiarism. However, it's weird how the motto looks strangely like the design for Southwest Airlines. As if the board didn't have any creativity this time around. Perhaps they were already "spring flinging" when they thought up this motto. Here you can see what I mean...

Have a great Fling. And as they say, Please Fling Responsibly. And try the fried Oreos, they're a fling staple food.

"Ruminations" from Aaron Karo's Ruminations on College Life

Thanks to KC4's Brian Lang for sending me these quotes to make the TP the best damn publication there ever was!

Karo, a Wharton graduate who is now a full-time comedian, became famous after publishing his thoughts and experiences while attending Penn. I've found two experiences concerning Spring Fling, which I thought were all too appropriate given it is only a couple of days away. Here it is:

"SPRING FLING IS this enormous annual three-day party at Penn when the campus liquor laws get ignored for the weekend and everyone goes out and gets rocked all day. Spring Fling is the time when even those kids who don't go out all year get drunk. You know that kid in your accounting class who annoys you by asking all those stupid questions? Well, now he is annoying you at a party and asking you all these stupid questions and telling you how wasted he is even though he's only had one beer. It's times like those when I wish the school would enforce the liquor laws just a little bit more."

"ONE SPRING FLING, I can't really remember which one, I was particularly destroyed, to the point where I could barely stand up anymore. As I rolled around on the ground in a drunken bliss, I was quoted as saying, 'Hey, I've seen more ceilings than floors today!' I love college."

Have a great Spring Fling!
