

So...

KCECH's Camelot

Inside this Tissue:

Introductions	1
In the Toilet Front	1
Calendar of Events	2
Bathroom Etiquette	2

High Standards

Toto Ltd.'s Z Series Neo-rest toilet, offers the worlds first auto fragrance release system and stereo music system, providing different scents and music depending on the season of the year. The Z series is priced at £1,600.

I bring unfortunate news to those fervent readers of the T.P., those who have come to rely upon its wealth of jokes, current events, etc. for their bi-weekly relaxation. This is not Franky Lee. My name is Vikram Dhindsa, and I shall be the Communications Manager for KCECH next year. Franky's going to take over everything and I called shotgun on his typewriter.

So you all have an idea of what to expect, I'm going to pull a bit of history out of my ass (even I cringed at that...sorry) and liken this to the succession of Woodrow Wilson by Warren G. Harding. Those of you unfamiliar with our 29th President haven't missed anything.

Warren G. Harding rose quickly in politics due to his speaking ability and total lack of initiative. He was promoted as Presidential material because an admirer thought "He looked like a President." Once in office, he admitted the job was beyond him. He spent his playing poker days with "the Ohio gang," most of whom eventually went to jail. He gambled away the White House china. He had a couple affairs everyone knew about, and kept a well-stocked liquor cabinet even though he voted for Prohibition. In short, he was very popular. Then he died and all the scandals came out.

Some people think that's who I'd be if I were President. So now you know a little bit about me & Mr. President We'll have fun next year.

In that spirit, I shall make a couple remarks:

- I want you to be comfortable around me, or my proxy (in this case, this little rag we (the royal we writers/editors use) call the The Toilet Paper. If you have any ideas or submissions, feel free to send them to me. You can flush the criticism (horrible pun intended to sear my point into your mind).
- Spring Break is coming up, and if you're from the Midwest (don't worry, no one else is), you migrate to Florida for the holidays (my sincere apologies to anyone from that state...it's lovely any other time of year). Teenagers from Indiana love to drive down to Florida, grab a room on the beach, get as sunburnt as possible, get as drunk as possible, etc. Be like the people on MTV, because they're so tight. But to make this trip economical, you need cheap beer. So in the spirit of Spring Break and for a cheap grab at popularity, I'm posting a website that provides recipes on how to brew your own. (If you're more history-minded/old, pretend it's the Prohibition all over again & you have a bathtub in some secluded woods). Anways, www.myownbeer.com. Enjoy.

Buena Mierda,
Vikram Dhindsa
vdhindsa@sas.upenn.edu (Questions? Comments?)
Future KCECH Communications Mgr.

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

Thurs, Feb 24—Barry Le Va at the ICA. Free Cosi Coffee and look at great works from this relatively unknown artist. 8-10 pm, sign-up sheet for free guided tour is at the front desk.

Thurs, Feb 24—Tea Time on File Sharing, EH Rooftop Lounge at 5 PM, with Joshua Beeman, Sr. Security Specialist here at PENN.

Tues, March 1— Dinner Discussion with Ali Jadbabaie, "Careers in Research Engineering," be on the look out for flyers.

Wed, March 2—Krispy Kreme Study Break, 10 PM in the 1938 Lounge. Donuts, fun, free. Come.

Wed, March 2, Dinner Discussion with Prof. Mike Useem, PDR, 6-7:30 PM. Listen to this great Wharton Professor talk about his life and his love for globalizing equity markets.

Thurs, March 3, Dinner Discussion with Barbara Kahn, PDR. Listen to the wise counsel of the head of the Wharton Undergraduate Division. Be on the lookout for flyers for more information.

February/March 2005

SUN	MON	TUE	WED	THU	FRI	SAT
20	21	22	23 Vegan/ Vegetarian Info Ses- sion Dinner Discussion	24 Barry Le Va at the ICA Tea Time on File Shar- ing	25	26
27	28	1 Dinner Discussion with Ali Jadbabaie	2 Krispy kreme Study Break Dinner Discussion with Useem	3 Barbara Kahn's Dinner Discussion	4	5

I encourage guest submissions, because I'm lazy like that.

10 simple rules of Bathroom Etiquette:

- (1) If someone excuses themselves from a conversation to use the bathroom, feel free to follow and continue to talk to them. Even follow them into the stall or stand right behind them at the urinal. Make sure you let them know just how important they are to you and how much you enjoy this conversation. Perhaps you could also hand them a nice hot towel. Remember, physical contact increases conversational intimacy.
- (2) Always keep knocking on a locked stall door. There might be three other open stalls and feet visible underneath the locked door, but still, knock on the closed one. Don't say anything either. Just keep knocking until you hear someone yell, "I'm fing in here you awipe!" Your concern is appreciated.
- (3) Make sure to leave your shampoo, soap, etc. in the shower when you are done. That way, those of us who figure out that no, someone is not about to use the shower even though their stuff is in it, will be able to partake in the bodily cleansers you have so graciously left behind.
- (4) Never flush. Not only will you be marking your territory and your toilet, but the smell helps to repel the cleaning crew who might be infringing on your personal space or stealing the shampoo and soap you left for the other bathers.
- (5) Use no less than FIVE (5) paper towels per bathroom break. Get those hands good and dry. Heck, even if you came in only to take a shower use a few towels to dry off those hard to reach places, like your face, hands, and private areas. Don't throw the paper towels away either, that would be wasteful. Just leave them anywhere, preferably on the sink, floor, and toilet seat.
- (6) The bathroom is a romantic setting. Remember this and bring your significant other into the coed bathroom shower with you. Make sure that you generate enough noise to let everyone on the floor know what you're up to. You'll have to choose a good time however, to set the right mood. I suggest during the morning shower rush, that way everybody will be forced to appreciate the atmosphere you've created.
- (7) Take at least an hour-long shower twice a day. Everyone will appreciate the sacrifice of the hot water for your personal cleanliness because we all know that our cold showers are keeping your god-awful stench at bay.
- (8) For the men, if you happen to cut yourself shaving, make sure that you let people know. Leave your mark, bleed on everything. Get blood on the sink, the mirrors, the floor, the paper towel dispenser, the guy standing next to you, everything. Maybe someone will send you sympathy flowers, or some anthrax.
- (9) For the ladies, if you happen to find that upon exiting the shower a large portion of the hair that was once on your head is now plastered on the shower wall and floor, leave it there. Let it sit in the darkness of the bathroom, waiting to terrify unsuspecting victims who stumble into its clutches. Stephen King is always looking for a new topic for one of his books and he may just have found it in the huge wad of hair you left.
- (10) Finally, live in the bathroom. Wait there in the darkness to jump out at whomever passes into your domain. Set up camp in one of the shower stalls and stare creepily without moving at anyone who wants to use it. You can also don a white mask and cape and become the Phantom of the Bathroom™ and sell the marketing and movie rights to New Line Cinema, but only if I get a 10% royalty.

matt - moorem2@seas.upenn.edu